FOREFATHERS' DAY.

New-England Societies Celebrating the Landing on Plymouth Rock.

REM. E. W. BOLLEND ORATION, AND MR. PRESCOTT'S POEM.

FESTIVAL IN BROOKLYN.

The New-England Societies of New-York and Brooklyn celebrated "Forefathers' Day" yesterday—in New-York by listening to an Oration from the eloquent and witty Dr. Holmes, and a Poem from Rev. John Pierpont; in Brooklyn by a Dinner.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes on New-England.

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, whose soul is full of the juice of genial New-England humor, spoke to the New-England Society of New-York last night, in an address that fairly met over with jollity. He drew a very crowded house to hear him.

He said his theme, he said, had come together into the inner circle of a Little Order—that is, had come at the invitation of a great Republic, which forms the outer circle; as citizens, had crossed the second line; as children claiming a common descent, had entered the inner ring of all, clasped hands and exchanged loving words and glances, more willing than if a whole Family Bible full of opinions spoke for brotherhoods. With mingled feelings of religious awe and filial piety, the Sons of New-England come to celebrate their Feast of the Passover; to refresh their memories in the history they have in common, and to find strength to meet the future. The story of Plymouth has a perennial interest. It may be told at a thousand anniversaries and next year be told again; the wood-dover is hovering and the wood-thrush is singing to-day in the woods of Plymouth, as they were growing and singing when the Indians found them there in the days of the Mastodon; still will the picture, sketched or finished, be held up to our gaze, as the Host is lifted in cathedral service, for us to fall down and worship. Plymouth tells an old story; but Christmas is still older; and no one is tired of Christmas yet.

So in his pleasant way of journeying along through past ages and among the mouldering bones of sturdy old defenders of the Faith, the Doctor made his audience cross the sea with him and look in upon the Pilgrim lands in Holland, where residence was so unpleasant that it was presently essential to hunt up new quarters. The country barely afforded their bodies bread and covering, while moral lean-ness went into their souls; and yet it was more for their children than themselves that they feared. The laboring cheese of Holland in that day, were brutalized and vulgar—they had little perception of the beautiful—their religious faith they were sorely wanting. If their character is not fully pictured by the pen of history, the pencil of the painter shows it in outline; its touches that are not enticing. The peasant of the Low Countries stands out in his real nature from the canvass of TENIERS; and in the beauties of REMBRANDT there is the blemish of the coarser vein. Who blames the Pilgrim because he hesitated to expose his pure-minded English child to the temptations of such contamination?

MYTHOLOGY MADE THE IMAGE OF THE PILGRIMAGE.

It is related of Io that in consequence of the jealousy of Juno, Jupiter changed her into a beautiful heifer; but that the revengeful goddess persecuted the heifer through the agency of a malicious gadfly. Tormented beyond endurance by the unceasing assaults of the insect, the heifer fled to and iro over the earth, and finally reached the banks of the Nile, where Io besought Jupiter to restore her to her original form. The request was granted. Io became the mother of a long line of kings, received divine honors and was worshipped under the name of Iris. Very much in the same way was the history of the Pilgrims written out. God uses gadflies with revenge wings and venom stings when he sees fit to drive his children away from despotism into freedom—from arbitrary inclemence into a freer land, from subjection to found a new dynasty. Providence sting the Pilgrims out of their retreat in order to make them freeman and rulers. Very thankful should we be that there are no such gadflies now days to help us to colonize our Pacific empire. The genius (Evil) is not a product of the soil we tread upon.

Half the Pilgrims had their homes on the beach at Plymouth before Miles Standish was married. There was no grass in the dooryard, no fruit in the orchard, no love in the heart. Bradford was chosen Governor, and Dr. Mather was called to establish their identity. Were they the relics of the red man or the Pilgrim? Unquestionably of the latter. Reverently they were restored, not without honor and remembrance. In this connection, the Doctor warmed up on the subject of the Monument that the New-Englanders propose to erect in honor of the Fathers, and gave his own views in opposition to the design. He conceived it tasteless and nothing better to put up a costly architectural testimonial at Plymouth; such a monument would become Boston, but plain Plymouth should be adorned by that which will be but an artist's cross-light to her bare and scowling landscape—God forbid that the dust of the Pilgrims should be disturbed by digging foundations for some ambitious Valhalla which shall make Plymouth the Mecca of the dilettanti! If a memorial is called for, let it possess two leading characteristics—simplicity and durability. If—said the Doctor—if I could finish Cologne Cathedral with a word and transport it with a wish, the last place I would choose for it would be the landing-place of the Pilgrims at Plymouth.

NEW-ENGLAND INNER LIFE.

A charming picture of the inner life of New-England came next. It was but a glimpse in at a half-opened door, and a scent of fragrant hay-ricks, but it was genial and smacked of said lang syne. The ancient New-England farm house is brown-looking, and has a weather-stain that is the natural tint of unpainted New-England houses. It fronts two stories on the road. The roof runs back with a great slope in the rear. A huge chimney is over-topped by a great poplar, which disappoints known leaves into its black throat when Autumn comes. The barn is huge, like the house, and it has mysterious nooks and secret stores of apples in the hay-mow. The ever graceful well-sweep supports the moss-covered bucket. Stone walls that seem to have stood for 50 years have broad lichens cementing them together like seals of office; nothing has been disturbed for many long years. The orchard is there; it is remarkable to note the wonderful sagacity of the boys in detecting a fast graft on a slow tree. The crooked foot-path, leading through the meadows, could only have been made by lovers or madmen. The wood yonder is fragrant with the sweet fern and the mayberry. In the cherry trees the robins fight and struggle for the red berries. The chestnut drops its burrs at the coming of the first frost, like dead shell-fish upon the seashore. Later still, the red leaves crackle under the feet, and the ice snaps in the pond, like the strings of an over-strained harpsichord. Such scenes as these never die out of the memory. Nature, subdued and humanized, is the New-England man's birthright. Let him pass fifteen years among the fields and forty years upon the pavements, and his dreams will still be of running barefoot among the clover.

INFLUENCE OF NEW-ENGLAND LITERATURE.

Is the intellect of New-England not thoroughly awake? A New-England man is ashamed to think that most of the literary fame of the nation comes through New-England men; coming from New-England soil directly, or distilled in her intellectual alembic. The list of New-England authors is familiar and slightly tedious. Take the map of the Union and spread it open before you, cover the whole of New-England with your fore-finger, and place on one side the list of authors who owe to her either birth, home or education, and tell us how many are to be found elsewhere in the country wherewith to make another list. It is too serious a matter, said the Doctor, (half seriously, half jocosely,) to boast of. But how happens it that this little shred and corner of the map of the Union should do so large a share of our thinking?

THE MAINE LAW.

Discussing very briefly the charities of New-England, and praising the self-sacrifice of the South at Norfolk and Portsmouth as a better charity still, the Doctor proceeded to scarify the Maine Liquor Law. That law shows that the old Puritan conscience is as much alive as ever; but does it not also show that there is still existing that religious element that persecuted? It is needless to speak of the law of Maine so long as the law of fermentation remains on the books. Puritan law could never keep Puritan ale from working on Sunday. Such a law, in the Doctor's opinion, deserves a larger study. It involves the whole duty of society, the whole theory of individual rights.

A HIT AT GARRISONISM.

Ultra-Abolitionism found no favor. It is very much the same with the black and white races as it is with the red and white. The white must rule. It is a law of nature. The Indian, a sketch made by Deity in red crayon as the outline of a more perfect manhood, is hunted down and extinguished. The black, according to the Doctor's theory, is and must continue inferior to the white. The thing that remains to be done, is to assimilate the whites of the North and South in feeling, so that civil discord may not finally end in open war. New-England stands on an isthmus, and busy hands are digging away the earth that still connects it with the main land. Let us not, we beg, see New-England poisoned through and through, with a hatred that hates the stamp with the sun. Let her not run off into a corner with her negative virtues, till her blood becomes too cold and thin for a true patriotism.

Enlarging upon this point of his subject, the Doctor was heard pretty loudly, but the sheers overpowered the theme, and the oration was finished.

REV. JOHN PIERPONT

had a funny theme, set to a special tune for the occasion, which he recited, and the ceremonies ended for the night.

NEW-ENGLAND FESTIVAL IN BROOKLYN.

Sentiments and Brief Speeches.

There are many of the staid and most respectable inhabitants of Brooklyn who look forward to the annual festivals of the New-England Society with most pleasurable anticipations, and who, when the evening of the day on which our forefathers landed on Plymouth Rock arrives, revel—if we may use the word in such connection—in the sober and dignified enjoyments of the occasion. Such, at least, has been the case for many years, and such was the prominent peculiarity of last evening's celebration.

The festival was observed in the Athenæum, in Atlantic-street, and there were about three hundred persons present, about one thing of whom were ladies—a very agreeable substitute for wine. The hall was tastefully decorated with American flags, and was brilliantly lighted. At the upper end, there was a table running across the hall, at which were seated the President of the Society, Mr. JAMES BERGEMAN, and the most prominent of the invited guests—Dr. LYMAN BECCHER, Rev. HENRY WARD BECCHER, Rev. W. J. BURLINGTON, Hon. ROLLIN SANFORD and Hon. AARON CLARK. At the lower end of the hall, in the orchestra, a very fine band was situated, and during the evening performed some pieces in praiseworthy style.

Traversing the length of the hall from the orchestra to the front of the guests' table, were five long tables, at which members with their ladies and others were seated. At the head of the principal of these sat Judge GREENWOOD, the first Vice President, dignified and yet agreeably sociable, as usual, and at the head of another was Mr. CYRUS P. SMITH, the second Vice President of the Society.

The company sat down to a good dinner soon after six o'clock, and at nine the President arose, congratulated the members of the Society, and proposed the following:

The Puritans—On the morning of the day we celebrate began a homeless exile, at the evening a Commonwealth, a free country and a free Government.

Rev. HENRY WARD BECCHER responded. One year ago he attempted to make two speeches during the same evening—one in Brooklyn and one in New-York—a witty speech in Brooklyn, and a sober one in New-York; but it turned out that the sober one was that made in Brooklyn, and the funny one in New-York. He feared that on the present occasion he would make one, neither sober nor funny. Proceeding, he spoke of ships which had gone down with rich stores, with valuable pictures on board; and passed on to say that if the barks which held our forefathers had gone down, they would have carried with them religions and nations unestablished. Of their voyage here he had often read with pleasure. There was a peculiarity about their thoughts and actions before they embarked, while on their voyage, and after they had landed upon Plymouth Rock. There were no high-flown speeches made by them at any time; in fact, in the reports of their doings previous to their landing here, there was little else than thankfulness to God, and accounts of the shoes and stockings and breeches and waistcoats they would require in the new land to which they were bound. To such a peculiarity, to the fact that they were practical men, he attributed their success.

The second toast was to

The President of the United States—and our whole country.

Received with cheers.

The third sentiment read was,

Our Puritan Fathers—As founders of new States and new systems, they wear to us a stern aspect, but those who dwell near their hearts, felt them beating with all the gentle humanities and the sweet charities of life.

This was responded to by Rev. W. J. BURLINGTON, who traced in the history of our country the true greatness and glory of our fathers. In the pure manuscripts of the Rising of the Revolution he found evidence that while the Puritan Fathers were stern and unbending in the cause of their country, they were the most tender and affectionate in the family circle.

The fourth sentiment read was as follows:

The Rocks, the Hills, and the Climate of New-England—Fit emblems of the character of her people.

This was responded to by Hon. ROLLIN SANFORD. He did not like his subject. It was cold and dreary. He had never heard of any man other than Moses who brought anything refreshing from a rock, and even Moses would have had to hammer a very long time upon the rocks of New-England before he would have succeeded in bringing anything refreshing or sparkling from them. He knew them well. He had plowed over them many times, and he had often slid down New-England hills. The rocks were cold and hard, and he never slid down a New-England hill without having to draw his sled all the way up again. But, perhaps, they expected him to say, what had often been said before, that the greatness of the New-England mind was in part, at least, owing to her bleak hills and barren rocks. This might be true, and it might not. But whether true or not, it was true that there was a pleasant side to a New-England hill, and a cheerfulness even on the face of her rocks, when viewed by a descendant of those who trod them after leaving the deck of the Mayflower.

The next sentiment was:

The New-England Clergy—Dwelling with their flocks, upon a thousand hills.

This was responded to by Rev. Dr. BECCHER, who was received with cheers. He was understood to say that there was but one event of modern times greater or more important in its consequences than the landing of the Pilgrims. In them there was a religious feeling which had spread out over the land and diffused prosperity and happiness wherever it rested. We cannot pretend to follow him through his remarks, or even to give a correct idea of what he said, for the unusual distance from the speakers, at which the reporters were seated, rendered it impossible to hear him.

The next sentiment was:

New-York—The crowning City; whose merchants are princes, and whose traffickers are the honorable of the earth.

This sentiment was briefly and appropriately responded to by Mr. S. B. CHITTENDEN.

The next and last regular sentiment was—

The Ladies—ARABELLA JOHNSON and ROSE STANDISH—New-England types of womanhood, who, in the language of COTTON MATHER, came from a land of plenty to a wilderness of want, and took New-England on their way to Heaven.

This was handsomely responded to by Hon. AARON CLARK.

Next followed:

Our Sister Societies.

To which there was no response.

The very last was:

The New-England Society of New-York,

Which was eloquently responded to by Hon. JOSEPH HOWES.

The ladies and younger men present now retired to the ball-room, and those advanced in years, went slowly and soberly to their comfortable homes.

Important News from the Plains—The Indians Seeking Peace.

The St. Louis Democrat publishes the following extract from a private letter, dated above Fort Pierre, 10th November, 1855:

"A few days ago, thirty or forty Sioux Indians came to Fort Pierre to pay a visit to General HARNEY. He held a council, and had CAMPBELL, the interpreter, to tell them that he wanted ten of the principal men of each band of the Sioux to come and see him within one hundred days; and should they listen to his words, and do as he wants them to do, it would be for their good, he would make peace with them. But if any of the bands should not come at the above time, he would then know that they wish to fight. He told them that it was immaterial to him how they acted, as he would just as soon fight as have peace; that he was sent by their Great Father to fight them, but since he had killed the brutes he had pity on them. All the Indians that have come to see him, say they don't want to fight. They want to live. He told them that 'he could not fight men that didn't want to fight.'"

BURNING OF A SHIP AT SEA.—The wrecking sloop Dolphin arrived at Key West on the 26th ult., with Captain CPSHING and the crew of the ship Concordia, abandoned by them on the Florida Reef in consequence of her being on fire. She was from Mobile, bound to Liverpool with a cargo of cotton—2,200 bales. On the morning of the 25th of November a smoke was discovered issuing from the wedges around the mizzen mast, when all attention was directed to securing the opening below, when it was found impossible to check the current of air rushing through the cabin. Finding that the fire was rapidly gaining on the ship, the master deemed it prudent for the safety of all on board to make for the land, then about ten or twelve miles distant. About 10 o'clock the ship ran ashore on that part of the Florida Reef known as Duck Key, and the crew safely landed on the beach at Key Vacas, about three miles distant. At this time the ship was in flames aft and the fire progressing rapidly forward. We learn that about 900 bales of cotton will probably be saved, 500 of which have already been landed here.—Key of the Gulf.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

FROM WASHINGTON.

No Prospect of an Organization.

Attack on the Editor of the Star.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 21.

There is no prospect of an organization yet. The day has been consumed in a running debate.

The Editor of the Star was attacked on the Avenue, this afternoon, by Hon. WM. SMITH, of Virginia, on account of some article which has appeared in his columns, and was pretty roughly handled. Several blows passed, and the Editor's right hand was badly injured. S

The Attack on the Editor of the Star—Promotions in the Navy—The Debate in the House—Bounty Land Decisions.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 21.

Hon. WM. SMITH, member of Congress from Virginia, and Mr. WALLACH, editor of the Star, had a severe personal rencontre on Pennsylvania-avenue this afternoon, resulting from the strictures of that paper on Mr. SMITH's political conduct.

The recent death of Major MULLER, of the Marine Corps, will occasion promotions in all the grades of that service. The changes will be promulgated early next week.

The debate in the House to-day widened the breach between the RICHARDSON and FULLER men. Four or five of BANKS' supporters have privately declared, unless he shall be elected in the next day or two, they will drop him, in the hope of diverting and concentrating a majority vote in some other gentleman not yet prominently named.

The Secretary of the Interior has decided that the volunteers engaged in the removal of the Cherokee Indians, are entitled to bounty land.

XXXIVth CONGRESS—First Session.

The Senate has adjourned over to Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 21.

MR. GIDDINGS MAKES A DENIAL.

Mr. GIDDINGS denied that he had used such a remark as was attributed to him by Mr. MCMULLEN, viz.: That the Government would eventually go into the hands of the North, and that the Abolition Party would elect their candidate for the Presidency, and that then the Union must and ought to be dissolved. He trusted no man would expect him to reply to that gentleman (Mr. MCMULLEN) except in case of palpable misrepresentation.

MR. MCMULLEN IS EMPHATIC.

Mr. MCMULLEN—What does the member mean? Does he suppose he is capable of insulting any member on this floor? When I am assailed by the contemptible member from Ohio, I will defend myself here or elsewhere. [Sensation.] I did condemn the course of that member, and have nothing to take back.

[illegible]

[illegible] friends from the charge that they are responsible for the failure to organize the House, inasmuch as, being in the minority, they are powerless, without a union with those with whom they cannot sympathize.

The proscriptive principles of the Know-Nothings, he said, formed an impassable barrier to a union with them. He invoked the friends of Mr. RICHARDSON to stand firm and not waive the Democratic organization, especially at a time when it is purged of the last vestiges of Free-Soilism and is entering upon new triumphs of principles.

Mr. FOSTER replied, saying the Democrats had wedded themselves to a measure, and not to a great principle, for it had come out to-day that the Nebraska bill is understood differently in one section from what it is in another. If principle is the test, let it speak but one language. He condemned the Democratic caucus resolution.

United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 21.

Cause No. 20.—Samuel Verden vs. Isaac Coleman.—Error to Supreme Court of Indiana. Judge Campbell delivered the opinion of the Court, dismissing the writ of error, the decision of the Supreme Court of Indiana not being a final decree.

No. 16.—Isaac R. Smith, owner of the sloop Volante, vs. The State of Maryland.—Judge Curtis delivered the opinion of the Court, affirming the judgment of the Circuit Court, with costs.

No. 7.—John G. Graham vs. Alexander Bayne.—Error to Circuit Court of Illinois. Judge Grier delivered the opinion of the Court, reversing the judgment of said Circuit Court, with costs, remanding the cause with directions to award sentire facias de novo.

No. 8.—Nehemiah Carrington vs. brig Ann C. Pratt, L. B. Pratt, claimant. Appeal from the Circuit Court of Maine. Judge Nelson delivered the opinion of the Court, affirming the decree of said Circuit Court, with costs.

Ex parte in the matter of William Wells, &c., on petition for habeas corpus. Wells was several years ago convicted of murder in this city, and sentenced to be hung, but President Fillmore commuted the sentence to imprisonment for life. The ground of petitioner's counsel is, that the pardoning power of the President is absolute, and, therefore, the condition is void; hence, Wells should be discharged.

No. 25.—The United States use Jas. Mackey et al. vs. Richard S. Coxe. Argument was continued by Mr. Carlisle for the defendant.

PLYMOUTH, Friday, Dec. 21.

Our resident population, with several hundred persons from abroad, have, to-day, celebrated the anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims. The exercises took place in the Unitarian Church, and consisted of prayer, singing an original ode, and oration by Hon. WM. H. SEWARD, of New-York. The orator occupied about an hour and a half, and was listened to with marked attention. A public dinner followed after the exercises in the Church, at which speeches were made and sentiments given. The celebration closed with a ball this evening.

The Prohibitory Liquor Law Sustained.

ALBANY, Friday, Dec. 21.

The Supreme Court of the Seventh Judicial District has just made a decision sustaining the constitutionality of the Prohibitory Liquor Law, as far as brought before them. This decision overrules the decision of Judge PARKER on the fifth section of the law, on both points. Prosecuting under the law will be commenced in Rochester immediately.

Disaster to a Coast-Survey Schooner.

PHILADELPHIA, Friday, Dec. 21.

The Atlantic City Coast-Survey schooner James Gutherie, from New-York for Charleston, sprung aleak on Wednesday night, off Sandy Hook, and now lies in Little Egg Harbor, unseaworthy.

Destruction of a Cotton Factory by Fire.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Dec. 21.

The De Kalb Cotton Factory, near Camden, South Carolina, was destroyed by fire on Sunday last. Loss estimated at $40,000.

DREADFUL CASE.

Death of a Child from Alleged Inhumanity of its Female Guardian—Arrest and Commitment of the Accused.

On Wednesday evening last a child of about 4 years, a native of Canada, named CHARLES C. R. HENDY, died suddenly at No. 49 Carmine-street, in the apartment of a Miss CATHARINE PARKHURST, with whom it had been placed to board by its father, its mother being dead. Certain statements been made by the neighbors gave rise to a suspicion that the child had not died a natural death. Yesterday an inquest was held on the body. The evidence adduced to the Jury shows a hard-hearted cruelty on the part of the woman PARKHURST scarcely ever paralleled. The testimony taken was quite long. We [illegible]

[illegible] the house with Miss Parkhurst; she occupies the back room on the second story, and I occupy the front room on the same floor; I know deceased, who appeared to be in delicate health; Miss P. has occupied her room about two months; she brought deceased with her when she moved in, and then he was in good health; I never was aware that he was sick; I have never seen him beaten, but have repeatedly heard his cries; about three weeks ago I heard him cry from being beaten; it was in the nighttime, and the cries awoke me; I heard the voice of Miss P.; the deceased slept with her in the back room; I could hear some one beating him, and it sounded as if done with the open hand; it appeared to me that the child was beaten severely at this time; about a month ago, while I was below stairs, I heard Miss P. beating deceased; this was on Friday evening, and on the following Sunday she told me she had beaten him at the time for three hours; she said she beat him with a piece of whalebone; I don't think that she had been constantly spoken of as long as the evidence mentioned; it might have been two hours, instead of three hours; she would beat him awhile, and then stop, and after a short interval commence beating him; she said that he was bad-natured, that is to say, would not [illegible]

[illegible] Miss Parkhurst, I remarked to her that I thought the child looked very sick; she said he was not sick; I saw him in the yard a few days after this, when he appeared as well as usual; about two weeks ago, she beat him for about half an hour; I was sick, and in bed at the time, in a room immediately under that of Miss P.'s; it sounded to me as if he was beaten with a strap; she beat him so severely that I thought she would kill him; this was about four o'clock in the afternoon, and about eight o'clock that evening two strange ladies came into the house, and inquired for Miss P.; they came into my room, and said that some one next door had told them of the manner in which the child had been beaten; that they had examined his body and found it covered with marks; Miss P. was out at the time, but the child was at home; the ladies did not say who they were or where they lived; I have not heard deceased beaten since then, nor have I often seen him since; he was in his room most of the time; I saw him in the yard on Thursday last, when he appeared to be well; I have had no quarrel with Miss P.; on last Monday night I heard deceased cry an hour for a drink; the first I knew of his death was on last Wednesday evening; he was then laid out; I did not know of his being sick; one of the ladies who called to see me, of whom I have spoken, called in my room, on Wednesday afternoon, and asked me if the child had been beaten since she last called; I told her that I had not heard him beaten; she said she had been in to see him, and that he would not recover; she did not say what was the matter with him; this was the first I knew of his being sick.

Other witnesses, mostly persons residing in the same house or neighborhood, were examined, and their testimony was corroborative of the above.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.

Dr. Machett testified that he attended the deceased for diarrhœa, but did not examine the body, and consequently saw no marks upon it.

Dr. Thos. Finnell testified that he had made a post mortem examination of the body, and found the body, arms and legs, covered with bruises; there was a cut on the top of the head half an inch in length, extending to the bone; the large and small intestines showed signs of recent inflammation; the cuticle on the back was removed for the space of ten inches in length and two in breadth; the brain was intensely congested, and this, in his opinion, was the cause of death; the inflammation of the bowels had nothing to do with the death, only so far as it weakened the deceased; the injury on the back seemed to have been there about two weeks, but had nothing to do with death further than the weakness it might have produced; the same is the case with reference to the bruises; very slight causes would produce the bruises on deceased; the injury on the back did not extend beneath the skin; he was a frail, feeble child; whatever produced the injury on the head, produced the congestion of the brain; the injuries on the body were of such a character that I am satisfied he was severely beaten; these would tend to prostrate him, but could not, of themselves, produce death; I think the wound on his head was sufficient to cause death, independent of the injuries on the body; falling against the edge or corner of a trunk would produce a wound on the head similar to this.

OTHER TESTIMONY.

Jane Vreeland, a servant, in the employ of Miss P., testified that on Monday last the deceased stumbled and fell against a trunk in the room, and by this means received the cut in question; I never heard him complain of it; Miss P. and myself were in the room when he fell.

VERDICT OF THE JURY.

The case was then given to the Jury, who rendered the following verdict: "Death by congestion of the brain, superinduced by ill-treatment at the hands of Catharine Parkhurst."

Miss Parkhurst, the accused, was then committed to prison to await the action of the Grand Jury.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Dec. 20, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In reading your paper this morning, I saw several communications in regard to the Russ Pavement in Broadway—one plan to chip off the edges, the other to spike the corners of each stone. Now, as you say, and most every other one says, the grooving plan has seen its day. We must try some other plan, or horses will command a very high price before long, on account of the scarcity of them, as there is not a day but some have their legs broken, or disabled from further use. I suppose the plan you state is the same as I saw in the Sun, proposed by J. C. Hoxie, which plan I think, as well as yourself, is very good; but the only right way to decide which is the best is to let Mr. Hoxie, or any other one who has a good plan, to do fifty feet square in some part of Broadway, and that will very soon test which will answer the wants of the GARMEN.

"Excessive of Immigration."

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Editorial of the Times of the 19th, under the above head, appears to me to contain fallacies which I beg leave to mention—for however true it may be that we worship more than any other people, the almighty dollar, and that in considering the effects upon us as a nation, of the great influx of foreigners, we are not to look so much at the increase of crime and the deleterious effect upon our morals, as upon the loss we sustain in dollars and cents—yet I claim that even in a pecuniary point of view (the lowest of all,) the writer of the above article is greatly in error.

The expenditure in New-York of 170,000 immigrants, of $4 each, would not be a net gain to the City of that amount, but only of the profit on the articles sold, which, at say 12½ per cent., would be on $700,000, only $90,000—scarcely enough to pay the City the additional expense of paupers that would be left behind out of such a number passing through the City.

The amount of specie brought into the country, you state, would be about $30 each emigrant, or $18,000,000. This amount of money would be worth to the country simply the interest, as we can get all the money we want from abroad, by paying six per cent., which, on $18,000,000, would be $810,00 per annum.

The expenditure of $2 per week of each immigrant you state, would be $17,000,000, but the gainson this expenditure is only 12½ per cent on $212,500; but even this gain you relinquish when you admit that the immigrant may only earn by his labor all he consumes. However, we will allow that a profit on their labor or consumption of food and clothing, may amount as above to $212,500 per annum, we then have this amount added to $810,000, making the grand total of $1,022,500 per annum, and this is a most liberal allowance. We have, in this village where I write, about 300 of these foreign immigrants, and they are generally industrious and well behaved. But our farmers complain that the wages paid for their labor drains them of all profit on their farms, and that, in consequence, they are not getting ahead, but on the contrary, their farms are yearly decreasing in value. We shall be glad if, instead of benefiting the town, they do not bring us into debt, and this is a fair sample of the whole country's experience.

Nevertheless, we would not close our doors to the immigrant. If he can find a more comfortable living here than in the old world, let him come and earn it, even if he does not add much to the wealth of the nation. The Americans are generally too proud to work, and if we can command labor from abroad, even by making ourselves poor in paying for it, still we are at liberty to do so. But don't let us attempt to substantiate the fallacy that all a man consumes is net profit to the country, when he consumes all he can produce, thus balancing the account; nor deceive ourselves by supposing that the loss of 170,000 immigrants per annum, who merely earn a livelihood, are benefiting the country to the extent you mention, or a hundredth part of it.

For my own part, (though I am not a K. N.,) I rejoice at the falling off in our immigration statistics. Let them come, but not faster than we can grind them in our mill of civilization; and, when they come, give them room to work or play, but not to vote, till they are thoroughly Americanized, and learn something of order, law and good behavior.

A SUBSCRIBER.

P. S.—If 170,000 immigrants produce a profit to the country, as you state, of $17,000,000 per annum, what will our present population of thirty millions produce? Answer—$51,765,714,285!! Verily, we are getting rich rapidly!

Board of Councilmen.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Councilmen last evening, as soon as the minutes of the previous meeting were read, Councilman GRAY protested against their adoption, on the ground that a portion of the business transacted in Committee of the Whole, was while there was not a quorum present; and also, that when the Chairman of the Committee rose first, there was not a quorum present. The minutes were nevertheless approved, and Councilman GRAY had leave to withdraw his protest. The Board then proceeded to third reading, and passed a large number of bills.

The following important resolution was lost, only 8 voting in its favor:

"That a ferry across the North River be established from the foot of Forty-second-street to the nearest practicable point on the opposite, or the New-Jersey shore; and that the Comptroller be, and he hereby is authorized and directed to carry this resolution into effect, and to give a lease for such a ferry, pursuant to the charter and the amendments thereto; such lease and privileges of a ferry to be for a term of ten years, and to be sold at public auction, after thirty days notice, and to be given to the highest bidder with adequate security, which lease shall be prepared by the Counsel to the Corporation, and shall contain, so far as applicable, all the covenants and conditions for the benefit and protection of the City, which are contained in the lease of the Houston-street and Williamsburg ferry."

The question of cutting off the steam below Fifty-ninth-street was referred back to the Committee on Railroads. Adjourned to Monday.

A New Book Auction Firm.

In our advertising columns to-day will be found the announcements of the new book auction firm of LEAVITT, DELISSER & Co., whose first sale is held to-night. We learn that the new firm commences business under the most favorable auspices, and that they are to be the auctioneers of the new Publishers' Association. Mr. LEAVITT is of the publishing firm of LEAVITT & ALLEN, and Mr. DELISSER has long been with the APPLETONS. They have taken the large salesrooms recently occupied by COOLEY, KEESE & Co., on the corner of Broadway and White-street.

Schools—Vacation.

The Evening Schools of this City wound up their sessions last night. They reopen on the 3d of January.

The Day Schools have a session on Monday, and then adjourn over to the 3d of January.

The Brooklyn Schools date their vacation from last night.

The Literary War Ended.

The case of MASON BROTHERS against HORACE GREELEY and others, was settled yesterday, the Tribune having concluded (under the circumstances) to publish MASON BROTHERS' card, and to retract, editorially, their charges against them.

☞ The Amoskeag Veterans returned to this City at 2 P. M. yesterday, from their visit to Washington. They were received at the landing by the "Old Light Guard," and some other companies, under whose escort they marched through some of the principal streets to the Park, where they were received by the Mayor. Later in the day they proceeded to the armory of the Light Guard, in Broadway, where a hospitable reception was given them. The Veterans leave for their home in New-Hampshire to-day.

☞ Ladies, look out whose smelling-bottle you use when among strangers. Fine-looking ladies in mourning sometimes administer chloroform with their proffered perfume, and then seize their victim's watch, porte monnaie, and jewels. Indeed, it is best not to be faint unless well protected.

☞ The young gentleman who caught the cow-hides from a strong-armed lady and her two sisters, as a just and proper punishment for making her the subject of his scandal, is doing well. His wounds are healing fast, and in a week or two he will be able to be cut.

☞ JOHN KELLY, of Hose Company No. 48, was run over by his hose carriage, an arm broken, and other damage done, on Thursday. Same day, a man in Baxter-street was run over by a fire-engine and hurt.

☞ Look out for your burning-fluid lamps. Tip them over and your carpet is on fire, your blessed baby burned, and you a mourner. Do be careful.

Police News.

Two girls of the town quarreled in the street on Saturday night, one stabbed the other with a knife, and was committed for trial. Her name Ann Gleason, of Reade-street.

Jerry Cook rode on top of an omnibus, and stole the driver's change. Money found in his boot. Committed.

About 6 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the grocery store of Mr. Hulse, corner of Allen and Houston streets. It was soon extinguished. Damage about $100. The origin of the fire has not been positively ascertained.

LONG ISLAND.

The Respite of Michael Gorman.

As stated in the Times of yesterday morning, a respite has been granted by the Executive staying the execution of MICHAEL GORMAN until the 18th of January next.

This respite was obtained mainly through the exertions of ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Esq. He telegraphed to his law partner on Thursday that the respite had been granted, but it was not until 10 o'clock yesterday morning—the day fixed upon for the execution—that the Sheriff of Kings County received the official paper, and all the preparations had been made to carry the sentence of the Court into effect, by erecting gallows, &c. At 6 o'clock yesterday morning the Sheriff informed GORMAN that his duty required him to proceed with preparations for the execution. He said that he was ready and prepared to die. The moment the official paper was received, the Sheriff, accompanied by GORMAN's father, sister and several other persons repaired to the jail. Mr. GORMAN informed his son of the respite when he replied "Well, I am glad of it." The Sheriff soon after read to him the official paper.

The rumor had spread far and wide that a respite had been granted, and consequently quite a crowd of people assembled in the vicinity of the jail to catch a glimpse of the interior. When the noise attendant upon erecting the scaffold was heard, the outsiders were fully convinced that the execution would take place. But, happily for the trembling convict, they were disappointed.

GORMAN, during the past week, has fallen quite fast, there being nothing left of him, as he expresses himself, "but his heart,"—"that," he says, "is a Hon's heart."

The Sheriff and his assistants, Messrs. FIELD and LOTT, have rendered GORMAN's situation as pleasant as possible under the circumstances, for which he takes every opportunity to express his thanks.

Burglar Sentenced.

In the Kings County Court of Sessions yesterday, JAMES THOMPSON, heretofore convicted of burglary in the first degree, was sentenced to ten years and five months' imprisonment at Sing Sing.

NEWS FROM UTAH.

The Drouth—Murders at Elk Mountain—the Mails—Agricultural Prospects—Immigration.

We have received files of the Deseret News, from Oct. 3 to the 24th inclusive. The News contains nothing of importance, although some of its details are of interest.

The severe drouth of last Summer seems not to have been so destructive as was anticipated. The wheat crop was mostly cut off, but other grains were in considerable supply, although scanty. The Mormons will probably suffer some inconvenience from a want of variety of food; but not from the lack of a sufficient quantity. The Elders exhort the people to lay up a store in advance, so that the grasshoppers can take an occasional feast, and the earth an occasional rest.

Scattering parties of Indians continue to commit depredations upon the exposed Mormon settlements and on traveling parties which are not sufficiently protected. On the 23d of September two persons were killed upon the Elk Mountains by the Utahs, and the first and settlement were abandoned.

At Ash Hollow, Sept. 8, Gen. HARNEY, with one hundred and attached part of his cavalry, fell in with Tamarus's band of Brules, opposite Ash Hollow and distant about seven miles, killing ninety-one, and wounding and taking prisoners many more, with a great many ponies, and a vast quantity of property of every description, nearly all belonging to the Mormons.

The Deseret News, of Oct. 24, says that they have received no mails from the States since the 5th of September. The Postmaster informs the people that the California mails have received no attention during the past year, and suggests that merchants forward their

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Hon. Judge Nelson.

FRIDAY, Dec. 21, 1855.

This trial was resumed today, at 10 A. M., pursuant to adjournment.

Several new witnesses were examined, and others were recalled and cross-examined, other witnesses, who had been sent for to testify to the character of Sylvanus M. Spencer, being first duly sworn, declared and gave testimony as follows:—

Spencer's character was pronounced good by the Captain of the ship in which he was shipped on board of the ship Ann Fish on the 6th of April, 1855, as her first officer, from the port of New-York, bound on a voyage to Rio Janeiro. He was shipped on board the ship Ann Fish on the 6th of April, 1855; he was the first officer; he kept the log of the ship, and which log-book, marked now by him "Sylvanus M. Spencer," is exhibited to the Counsel; he was a very correct and accurate man in his habits; he was a very correct man in everything that he performed during the voyage, so far as witness knew; he left the ship on the evening of the 4th of June, 1855, at sea, and shortly after six o'clock, Captain Frazier had some conversation with him; witness took charge of the watch from twelve until four o'clock; he has no recollection of having seen Captain Frazier from eight o'clock until four o'clock, on the night of the 5th, according to nautical time; indeed, he is positive that he did not see him; at four o'clock witness went into the cabin to call the Captain at the end of his watch; passed through the cabin, in which there was a dim light; went to the Captain's state-room, and found no light burning there; witness called the Captain, received no answer; repeated the call, when I seemed to hear a deep, hard breathing; throwed open the door, and there I saw a light which I shall never forget; kind of hazy my sight, and for an instant was at the doctor's room; called him, and we both went into the Captain's room; found two needed assistance, and called the steward and carpenter; the Captain was lying on his right side, with his face to the starboard of the ship, sleeping in a starboard state-room, and of course his face was from us; we had considerable difficulty in turning him over to look at the wounds; he kept saying at intervals "Let me alone, let me alone, let me alone—put your sleeping clothes on." We finally got him over, when, in spite of us, he got out of the berth to urinate; we tried to coax him to stay in the berth, and let us dress the wounds; I stayed by him until the doctor got his bandages up; the weather then became foul and hot, and my presence otherwise was required; I saw him always with his spittoon in his mouth; he he vomited about twelve o'clock, or shortly after twelve, on the same day; does not recollect whether there was a moon or not; recollect that there were dark, heavy clouds passing; was once during my watch, from twelve to four o'clock, in the pantry, but did not see the Captain; he went into the pantry to get something to eat; was there at another time during the same watch to light a cigar, but did not see or hear anything of the captain then; heard some one cough in the cabin; went to get something to eat about one o'clock, and after eating, or shortly after eating, heard my cigar and went on deck; saw the door of the pantry near the captain's state-room open; shortly then after, heard the footsteps of the captain; saw no blood on the floors of the ship, from twelve to four o'clock; was the weather clear or hazy? Objection of the witness between the captain and my one during the voyage; he does know of difficulties having occurred; some of them I witnessed; he had one with William Binney; he had another with a man whom we call Charles; he had another with a man whom we call the Blacksmith; he had another with a man named Gould; he has heard that the captain had another difficulty with a man whom we call Jos; and who is in my watch; this man's name is Joseph Venable; I do not know of my own knowledge of this last difficulty; does not know of his own knowledge of any threat made by any one against Captain Frazier.

At this point the witness complained that he was not well, and immediately his further examination was postponed until to-morrow, at half-past nine o'clock.

THURSDAY, 20th.—The examination of Sylvanus M. Spencer was resumed. Being asked if he suspected any one with having murdered Captain Frazier, he answered that he did suspect four of the crew of the ship, and being asked to name them, he replied that a man called Charles, another named William Binney, another named John Gould, and the fourth called Joseph Venable are those whom he suspects, and added, I remember another, who is known on board of the ship as Blacksmith, and these are all of whom he has any suspicion; the witness was then asked to state the reasons for his suspicions, and proceeded to say—as to Charles, my reasons for suspecting him are these—the night previous to the murder the captain punished him for not giving me immediately a reply to a question I asked him; I was not present at the time; I only heard the blows and some words; Charles is much in company with William Binney, John Gould and Joseph Venable; since the death of Captain Frazier his looks are much altered; he has a wizzard expression of countenance, which I never noticed before the occurrence; as to William Binney, he has been punished by the captain and myself several times, for various offences, and has been heard to use violent language to the captain and myself; I cannot vouch for the language; those who heard it will give it to you; Mr. Macrae heard it, and reported it to me; since the death of Captain Frazier I have found it necessary to punish Binney for breaking open and stealing from his shipmate's chest; this was charged against him, and, being a suspicious character, I put him in irons; as to John Gould, I suspect him because of his association and connection with the others; I mean Binney, Charles and Venable; I suspect Joseph Venable because of the marked change in his countenance since the death of Capt. Frazier; he was threatened by Doctor Herbert yesterday and the second mate, the carpenter and Mr. Macrae; and he is much with Binney, Gould and Charles. I suspect the man called Blacksmith; do not exactly know his name, for the following reasons: As far as I can judge, he is out of his mind; I had frequently punished him by tying his hands over his head to one of the beams, for various offenses; Captain Frazier has also done the same, but not lately for the poor wretch has been the subject of our regret, and no notice has been taken of him of late; but it has often occurred to me that it was ill affected; and these are my reasons for suspecting either of these men with having been instrumental in the murder of Captain Frazier; I have no suspicion of any one else; there is a circumstance that has occurred to me within the last twenty-four hours; I will now proceed to relate it.

Note.—Witness here took up a book, on one page of which he has, by the request of the counsel, written "Sylvanus M. Spencer," and which is referred to as being a book of his own, and then read from it as follows: "Mr. Clarke, the second mate, has connected himself very mysteriously to me the last twenty-four hours, scarcely speaking, and not even returning common civilities. Yesterday afternoon, while I was under examination, he injured his hand so that it bled considerably. I understand it was done getting out a cask of bread. He, however, went to my room, took out one of the marling spikes, of which I have a number, and showed it to some one or more, making some remarks, the nature of which has excited my suspicions and brought to my recollection a circumstance that occurred about a fortnight after leaving New-York; on which occasion he did not obey my orders promptly, and made use of some impertinent remarks to me; for which I struck him a slight blow on the head with a wooden belaying pin much harder than I intended, and even knocked him down, and then sent him to his room; on this occasion he swore he would have my life before I reached Hong Kong. Of this circumstance and threat I have not thought until the present moment, and think it may portend some evil design. Eight o'clock A. M., Tuesday, 19th of June." Being asked how this memorandum, prepared since his examination, stooped at half-past two o'clock yesterday, bears upon the inquiry as to who killed Captain Frazier, he observed, it bears thus: shows a design of which I had not the least suspicion, and an evident wish to fasten something upon me, or myself, except any inquiry; and that was the idea when I penned this, thinking that a person that could act thus, could be guilty of something more; and I never had any suspicion of him until then, and trusted him with everything about the ship except my own life.

Note.—Here the witness was admonished that he might be mistaken in charging Clarke, the second mate, with going to his room and taking out any marling spike therefrom, or showing any marling spike to any one. Proceeded to say: I did not see it; but I heard such remarks as satisfied me it was done. The witness being asked who was his watch on the night when the captain was killed, answered, Mr. Macrae was in my watch, and also William Binney, Joseph Venable, the man Charles, Blacksmith, Thomas Connolly, Henry, Davis, William, Emanuel and Antonio and Lewis; of these Antonio and Emanuel were at the helm. No regular watch was kept in the pantry; it was visited occasionally during the night, and he believe Mr. Macrae came down to ascertain the hour; and furthermore the said deponent saith not.

SYLVANUS M. SPENCER.

Mr. McKeon then read the book from which we make the subjoined extract as a specimen, verbatim:

"Oh, how shall I describe my feelings; this morning at 4 o'clock A. M. found the Captain wounded to a fearful extent—his feet mutilated, and death fast closing in, the doctor gives no hope, still I hung him up in the cabin, trying for some partial recovery of sensibility, to catch his last wishes, if he wished to think that we understood each other. He groaned and groaned, but not a word or anything that could enable him to say that it was done with this that or the other, or who was the fiend assassin." "8 o'clock & 20 Doctor drinks the Cape May liquor a few days before he expires, and probably receives his death in a short time. Determined to bear away for the port of Rio Janeiro, and decision. Rather part of this day strong breezes and heavy squall with rain, necessary sail, arm'd ourselves with all possible precautions." "10 o'clock.—Doctor gives up all hopes; at noon informs me the Captain is dying. Oh this is horrid. Tried hard for some partial recovery of sensibility." "20 minutes past noon.—The Captain expired; set the cook and steward on watch and lay him out and endeavored silently upon the foulks aft." "4 o'clock P. M., June 16, N. Pinos—Mustered the crew and informed them simply that the Captain was dead and that I was keeping the ship for Rio Janeiro; saw no expression of countenance that looked confused or that should give any clue to the detection of the assassin."

"Carpenter to work making a coffin. I have the Alderman's whiskey below which the doctor thinks is sufficient to preserve the Bodie. This I wish to do by all means (as being an express wish of him some time ago in case he should die)."

"Also that upon my arrival at Rio Janeiro (and God only knows whether I shall or not) the crew may be confronted with the corpse and there in the presence of nubies and unnurtured observers some clue be discovered to the detection of the murderers. O my dear friend think of the horror of my position. Indeed I find Language inadequate to express it, or to convey an idea of the horror of this foul deed. A man evidently sleeping struck senseless at a blow and that blow repeated to make assurance doubly sure again and again."

"About noon got the coffin ready."

"5 o'clock P. M. entered the corpse and covered it with liquor not having quite enough added a bucket of water which in the opinion of the ship surgeon is sufficient to preserve the corpse. 5 o'clock mustered all hands and lowered the coffin the lower hole. Again I cast a scrutinizing glance on every countenance but every thing is black and I dont seem to possess my natural penetration."

"Oh Edward sailors will be sailors for while we where pitching the cover of the coffin on deck, I went forward, and there was four of the rogues playing cards; and when we lowered the corpse in the hole one of the sailors began to shout ave ave for which I upraided him and I understand he has since wept."

"Night fall of the 6th. Civil time. Cabin. Oh you have never been to sea and can form no Idea of the solemnity of the scene. But such a calm as this surpasses everything of its kind that ever fell to my lot to behold; only think of us anxious to reach Port for our own safety as well as the vessell, and other innocent lives on board, for how far the intention goes towards the murder of every one aft God only knows; and may be the destruction of the vessel by fire and other means and awful thought I cannot endure it the murderer may be in our midst, —some one not suspected."

* * * * * * *

"Everything almost belonging to the late Capt. Fraser I have had put under lock and key in the staterooom, for I'v not time to make an inventory there of, which I propose to do upon my arrival at Rio Janeiro, and then have then packed up and sent to his bereaved family."

* * * * * * *

"The Doctor tells me that the crew thinks the Captain killed himselve; Poor fellows, let them think so. But I, who have seen the corpse, both before and after death, can have no such opinion; if I could, it would be a great relieve to my mind. Daylight once more, Thank Providence, and everything as usual?"

* * * * * * *

"Monday, 18 June, 1855 20 before eleven o'clock. The consul came, as heard accompanied by the Captain of the Brig Brookbridge and several other gentlemen, captains of vessels and two physicians and ordered the corpse got up from below which was done; made a post mortem examination of the head of our late Captain and established the fact of his murder; for the wounds in the opinion of the medical men must have been inflicted by some person or persons; it was quite evident that two instruments must have been used as there was the Head or Skull broken or completely stove in—and one wound evidently done with a sharp instrument."

The next witness for the prosecution was

Dr. James E. Chilton, who proved, first, that he got no indication of blood on the marlin spike; second, that he examined the pantaloons carefully, found several spots which had the appearance of blood, cut them out, subjected them to a test, and found as indications of blood, but pitch; third, that he examined the spots on the hat, and found that they were nothing but red paint; and fourth, that he detected two spots which were blood on the bosom of the shirt.

Zophar Piersall was the last witness for the prosecution.

The witness was cross-examined at some length by Mr. Fullerton. His replies at first gave some indications of prevarication, but eventually he explained himself without testifying to any new fact of importance.

Mr. McKeon—That is our case.

THE DEFENCE.

Mr. Fullerton rose and said that the defence had no formal opening to make, and little or no evidence to offer, the other witnesses on board of the vessel at the time of the murder, being either discharged in Rio Janeiro, or sent on the Sea Witch. Some questions, however, would be put to the Doctor and Steward. He was desirous the defence should not be called upon to sum up to-night.

The Court seemed to think that the case should be closed to-night.

A recess of fifteen minutes occurred.

When the Court resumed, the doctor was again called, but could not be found.

Edward Medlicott, the steward, was then recalled.

He did not recollect the morning when the ship was in the bay of the difficulty between the captain and Mr. Spencer; did not know of any such difficulty; he remembered the morning when the ship was towed out, and heard no conversation between them at the breakfast table; if there had been any he would have heard it; I was attending the table.

To Judge Beebe—We had the food in the galley, and went backwards and forwards to get it.

To Mr. Dunning—The food was laid on the breakfast table before they sat down; there was no quarrel that ever I knew of when the vessel was in the Horseshoe.

To Judge Beebe—During the time they were eating I used to be in the pantry.

To Mr. Dunning—The pantry is adjoining the room; I could have heard what they said often in the pantry.

To Mr. Beebe—There was no other place I went except at dinner time, when I went to the galley to get the dessert; after we left the Horseshoe we used to have warm cakes, and went for them at breakfast; I do not know that I was anywhere at breakfast that morning but in the pantry.

Doctor Bordenet was again called, but did not answer.

The Court asked the defence to state what they proposed to prove by him, and perhaps it might be agreed to.

Mr. Dunning said that he proposed to show by the Doctor that no quarrel took place at the breakfast table that morning in the Horseshoe.

The District-Attorney said the Doctor testified before the Commissioner that that quarrel took place after breakfast.

John W. Clark, the second officer, was recalled—he could not tell how many more shirts there were in this bag; there were more than one; all Spencer's dirty clothes were in it.

To Judge Beebe—This was the only shirt on which I saw any blood.

A conversation took place between the Counsel as to the fact whether Spencer himself did not close the Captain's window on the morning of the 5th of June, after the deceased man was discovered in the condition to which the witnesses testified.

The Doctor not being present to prove this, however, the matter was dropped.

The Counsel for the prisoner having now closed their testimony,

Mr. Fullerton proceeded to sum up the case in behalf of the prisoner.

Mr. McKeon, the District-Attorney, addressed the Jury on the part of the Government.

The learned Judge delivered a lucid charge, which, on the whole, appeared to incline to the belief that the facts adduced on the evidence were consistent with the innocence of the prisoner.

The Jury then retired, and at 10 o'clock P. M. had not agreed.

The Court then adjourned.

THE SPRAGUE MURDER TRIAL.

The Jury, of Course, Cannot Agree.

FOURTH DAY.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The Court met at 10½ o'clock this morning, and the Jury having been polled, the Recorder proceeded to deliver his charge. The Court-room was crowded with spectators, considerable interest being manifested by the public in the result of the trial.

The Recorder then charged the Jury.

At the conclusion of the Charge, Mr. Clinton rose and made numerous exceptions, which we have not space to insert. Quite a sharp cross-fire was kept up between that gentleman and the Recorder, much to the interest of the on-lookers and auditors. The Jury went out at 12 o'clock. Sundry small cases came up for trial during the afternoon. At 4½ o'clock they returned into Court, and, of course, stated that they could not agree. (Juries never agree now-a-days.) They wished to know what constituted the different degrees of manslaughter, but did not think there was any possibility of their agreeing, even if informed.

The Times for California.

THE TIMES FOR CALIFORNIA will be issued Three Months, in ample season for the mail steamer leaving Aspinwall for San Francisco. It will contain the Proceedings in Congress; a complete Summary of Domestic and Foreign Intelligence since the publication of the last steamer; Editorial Articles on important topics; News Items of interest from all parts of the United States; full Commercial Summaries, Reports of Public Meetings, Marriages, Deaths, &c. The mails will close at 1 o'clock. Single copies, in wrappers, ready for mailing, 25 cents. Agents will please send in their orders as early as possible.

☞ Nothing was done in Congress yesterday towards organizing the House by a choice of Speaker; there were no ballotings, and the whole day was consumed in paltry debates and personal explanations. One of the Virginian members, the Hon. Wm. SMITH, let off his superfluous energy by attacking the Editor of the Washington Star, in the Avenue. The probabilities of an election of Speaker are as remote now, as on the first day of the meeting of Congress.

Evils of an Unorganized Congress.

Some fifteen hundred miles distant from this City, the commercial centre of the Union, within our own territory, there exists a civil war, a bloody strife of a purely political nature. Within the confines of a new settlement, in a wilderness, some eight hundred men are under arms; their families are there, and their hopes and resources for themselves and their children are scattered about them. Around are thousands of armed and blood-thirsty ruffians, awaiting but the signal to commence an onslaught upon them, from which all quarter is excluded, which can only end in the entire massacre of the besieged, or in a dearly paid for repulse of the assailants. The same group is of tried, earnest, resolute men, defending their homes and hopes; men who have staked everything upon the ground they defend; men who have left civilization in the East, under the guarantees of federal protection and the right of self-government, to civilize and people a soil twice solemnly assigned to them and freedom—the paradise, in natural aspects, of the whole western country; men who have given no other offence to the lands surrounding them, than by claiming what the law secures all men—liberty of thought, speech, and government. To be conquered by the savages without would be the same thing as temporary massacre; to conquer, must be at the expense of decimation. While we write the tragedy may be enacting, and for the first time in our history as a united people, the blood of American citizens shall be poured out by Americans, with a vindictive eagerness only paralleled in the story of barbarous ages.

Some two hundred miles hence is the seat of our Government, whose business it is to protect the citizen, and secure him the enjoyment of every political right. Legitimately, it has no other business than that. All its functions are adequate to that single end. It has soldiers and arms amply sufficient to extinguish the widest and wildest insurrection of bad people at all likely to occur. It uses these instruments of order and protection in certain cases, and in behalf of certain classes of people. It uses them freely and cruelly against an almost extinguished tribe of Aborigines, whose offence is, at the root, no greater than the plunder of a trader or trapper. It uses them to escort back to his owner, at an expense of $30,000, a negro boy, fled from his plantation. But when fifteen hundred peaceful, industrious, and inoffensive American citizens, whose misfortune it is to have been born above the tropic, are on the eve of being mercilessly slaughtered, men, women, and children, by a crew of savages more sanguinary in threat than Sioux or Sac, that eminently conservative and paternal Government has had not whatever for its expensive apparatus of protection—nay, not content with leaving the doomed community to its fate, it encourages the step-Governor it has assigned the persecuted people, to invite larger reinforcements of madmen from other States, and to lend all the energies of its authorities, legal and illicit, within the official's reach upon the victims, only restraining the paternal arm to be fully unbared when the work of annihilation is to be finally completed. For all practical purposes, the war in Kansas is a war made by the Federal Executive, upon a people whom it actually invited to the soil now to be stained with their blood.

A third picture, and the gallery is complete. The only power, short of revolution, that can intervene for the restoration of right and the salvation of the innocent, is Congress, now assembled, but still unorganized. The Senate may be left out of the count; of late years, it has admitted into a branch of the Executive, and merely reflects the will of the reigning Cæsar. But the House of Representatives, coming from the people immediately; coming so directly as to be thoroughly apprised of the popular indignation at the wrongs of the new territory; and, by what was presumed to be an effective majority, opposed to the surrender of a fertile commonwealth to such extermination as visited the Valais and Glencoe—the House of Representatives, we say, which can right the wrong and the outrage, remains, through the restriction of less than a dozen individuals, unorganized and helpless. The House may drive the Executive to the abandonment of the Navy; it may require that the wants of Government shall be fed, and its active power, altogether, it may in short, repress the civil war now raging unchecked on the national soil, and yet its energies are paralyzed and neutralized by those interminable votes for "organizing." If blood has been, or is to be shed in Kansas, this mischievous group of incapables shall be held answerable for it. By their indefensible course they have prevented help to the men of Lawrence; have permitted, or refused to prevent the waste of life; and shall not the blood of the victims, if victims there be, be required at their hands?

The Navy Retired List.

We are very glad that a movement has been made in the Senate to bring to light the records of the late Navy Board for forming a retired list of officers; for the reputation of the members of the Board, as well as that of the officers who were the subjects or victims of their decisions, demands that the grounds for their action should be made public. The retired officers, the furloughed and "dropped," as well as those put on leave of absence, as a matter of course, all complain of the injustice and hardships of their cases, and it is only proper that they should be informed of the causes which influenced the Board in their decisions, and the members of the Board should be permitted to justify themselves to the public. Let us know the whole truth, and no one will have any right to complain if he should come off second best by the exposure. The President himself, and the Secretary of the Navy, both intimated that there were cases which they did not approve in the decisions of the Board, but approved them on the whole. It is hardly fair that the unfortunate and the vicious, the invalid and the imbecile, the physically incapable and the morally depraved, should all be included together in one condemnatory list, and the public not be allowed to know the difference between them. Some of the furloughed officers are still young and vigorous men, who have to enter upon a new course of life, and make their way in the world as they best can, and it is unjust to them in the last degree that those who may have been put upon the list for some error of discipline, or youthful indiscretion, should be put in the same category with the dissolute or incapable. No harm can possibly be done by a full and above-board exposure of all the influences which were brought to bear upon the Retiring Board; it will at once be the means of disposing of a good many importunate men who will else, under the shield of mystery, be continually complaining of the injustice done them, while their friends will be besieging the Government for their restoration. It is most desirable for all parties concerned that everything connected with the action of the Board shall be made public; the incapables and the dissolute will have no cause for complaint, while the unfortunates will be gainers by the publicity of the causes which led to their dismissal.

The New-England Festival.

In all the principal cities of our widely extended territory to-day, from the Pacific to the Gulf of Mexico, on the banks of the Missouri, the Mississippi, the Ohio, the Delaware, the Hudson, and the shores of the great lakes, the sons of New-England meet together to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers on the bleak shores of Massachusetts Bay, 235 years ago. It is a remarkable circumstance that the settlement of no other part of the country is thus commemorated by an annual festival, and the fact shows how completely the Pilgrim element has given a savor to the whole nation. In this City the day has long been kept by the New-Englanders, who have added so greatly to its wealth and beauty, in a peculiarly appropriate manner, by religious and literary exercises, and by a public dinner. The literary services were held last evening in the Church of the Puritans, in Union-square, when that eminent New-England poet, Doctor OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, delivered an oration, and Rev. JOHN PIERPONT delivered a poem. This evening the New-England Society have their annual dinner at the Astor House. At Plymouth, yesterday was observed with unusual demonstrations of festivity, and the oration was delivered by Senator SEWARD, who is of New-England descent. Thirty-five years ago, on the two hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, DANIEL WEBSTER, then in the noon-tide of his brilliant career, delivered the oration at Plymouth, which has been esteemed as one of his noblest oratorical efforts. The oration of Mr. SEWARD will be found reported at full length on our Second Page; it is worthy of the occasion and of his distinguished reputation. The New-England Society of Brooklyn held their celebration last evening, a report of which we give on another page.

Registry of Designs.

In France everything in the shape of a new design which requires an exercise of the inventive faculties, or of artistic skill, is patented for the benefit of the designer. A new style of bonnet, the shape of a hat, the head of a walking stick, the decoration of a pipe bowl, a new perfume, or a new play, are all entitled to a brevet, and the originator enjoys the full benefit of his ingenuity. It is essential to the prosperity of a manufacturing nation that this should be the case. Without this perfect security against an infringement of the right of property in the fruits of human ingenuity, France would at once degenerate into a third or fourth rate power; for she has no raw materials to export, and all her wealth lies in her artistic ingenuity and the industry of her artisans. It is a matter full of profitable suggestion to reflect how little that France can contribute to the wealth of the world in the shape of raw materials. She sends us absolutely nothing which our own soil does not produce in much greater abundance than her own, yet see how she draws us of our specie and the fruits of our labor to pay for the artistic gim-cracks which we receive from her. We send her a bale of cotton, which we repurchase of her in the shape of lace and muslins at two or three hundred per cent advance on the price in which [illegible] that thinks what we repurchase as textile, and imaginary and fanciful, and about; we send her hog's lard, and repurchase it in the shape of olive oil; we send her raw hides, and it comes back to us in the shape of gloves and slippers. There is a large warehouse up Broadway where all manner of dyed and brandied fruits, roasted chestnuts, goose-liver pies, and pickles, imported from France, are sold, merely because they are put up prettily in fancy boxes and bottles, while our farmers allow such things to rot in their fields, because there is nobody who has the ingenuity to preserve them.

Under all the changes which the government of France has passed through during the last fifty years, the interests of art have never been neglected; under the Republicans, Napoleons, Bourbons and Orleanists, the same fostering care has been extended to art, and the nation has waxed strong and mighty in consequence.

We have, hitherto, shown an almost barbarous indifference to the interests of our art-manufactures. Even at this day, the author of a new drama cannot print it without danger of his right of property being invaded, and the invention of a new article of dress, or a new artistic design, has no protection against anybody appropriating his ideas, who may find it to his interest to do so.

But, we are happy to learn that an effort is to be made to bring this subject before Congress, and to move for a registry for designs such as exists in both France and England. It is only by such means that our artisans can ever be encouraged, or the industrial resources of the country be developed. If Congress shall ever be so freed from the distracting sectional disputes which have so long retarded wholesome legislation, and prevented the natural development of our internal resources, we trust that this subject will receive the attention which its importance merits, and that every originator of a new idea will be secured the enjoyment of the fruits of his own industry or genius.

Academy of Music.

DONIZETTI's "Favorita" was produced here last evening, for the first time under the present management, and consequently with an entirely new cast. The leading attraction, or rather the novelty from which most was expected, was the Leonora of Mlle. NARTHES DIMEZ. We have been accustomed to so much excellence in this rôle that we have, we fear, become fastidious and difficult to please. Judging Mlle. DIMEZ by those who have preceded her in this character, and also by the high estimate we have formed of her capabilities, we can scarcely look on the performance of last night as a triumph. The music seemed to cost Mlle. DIMEZ much effort, and once or twice we fancied she was not quite up in the text. Of the other artists we cannot be so lenient. BRIGNOLI was scarcely tolerable; shamefully ignorant of the music, and hopelessly vapid. GARRANONI as Balthazar did the best he could, but, unfortunately, it was insufficient. MORELLI was the only artist of the evening who displayed some perception of the requirements of the rôle, and he was not faultless. We cannot even say a good word for the orchestra, which was coarse and blatant. The only satisfaction we can afford ourselves is the conditional one that all these things may be remedied by the next performance of the opera on Monday evening.

Mr. Gottschalk's Soiree.

We have on more than one occasion expressed our opinion that the palmy days of piano-forte playing and players have past away. So much has been done in the way of "developing" the instrument, from the gentleman who made a bet that he would strike a million notes in twelve hours down to the Briareus of Weimar, who strikes twice as many in half the time, that there is really very little left to develop. Mere strength has given place to mere rapidity, and now we of the present day are privileged to enjoy a frightful combination of the two. The saddest sight we have to encounter in our melancholy rambles through the various places of amusement is that of a pianist stripping to his instrument. It is no consolation to us that he merely pulls off his gloves. He might as well take off his coat like any other able-bodied laborer. The work he is going to do—the digging, delving, hammering and spinning—is of the severest kind, and we cannot help feeling that he should go into it with perfect looseness. When he has commenced, our admiration is divided between the vigor of the player, the strength of the instrument, and the endurance of the audience. When he has finished, we feel ourselves suffused with a moist warmth, as if we had been assisting at a foundry where a great many hot sparks were flying about, and finally we go away, thirsting for water or music, or anything that is cool and refreshing. Of such laborious players we have had enough. There are some dozens in New-York at the present moment, and every steamer brings a few vigorous recruits. The only joke we can extract from this alarming fact is the singular one that each of these gentlemen denounces, in the most unmeasured terms, the hammering propensities of his brother, while he himself hammers away as lustily as ever.

If we could detect nothing in Mr. GOTTSCHALK but more or less of the perfection of his predecessors, we certainly should not go out of our way to speak of him. It would be more in accordance with our feelings to let him thump his way through the world and the keyboard as rapidly as might be. But it is far otherwise. In Mr. GOTTSCHALK we have an artist who doubly claims our attention and respect. He is entitled to the first for an immense mastery of the instrument, yet abstinence from the annoyances we have mentioned, and to the second for an unequivocal manifestation of genius—none the less genius that it is peculiar.

There are two ways of appealing to a piano-forte. The first and most common we have already hinted at. It is to pitch into "it" as though it were a musical rowdy which can only be made to do civil things under compulsion. The second is to appeal to it as an intellectuality that can solve great psychological problems, not otherwise soluble. Mr. GOTTSCHALK is one of the few who are blessed with the rare power to do the latter. His playing is full of inner-meaning and suggestiveness. All his wonderful mechanical skill and dexterity are kept in the back ground, by the strong and impalpable force of a predominant idea. He executes immense difficulties without impressing us with the idea that they are difficulties at all. Not because his superior dexterity enables him to do so, but because these difficulties are used for a secondary purpose only. In the opening Fantasia, (Italian Glories,) there were passages which even in third-rate hands would have brought down the house, but which, executed faultlessly by Mr. GOTTSCHALK, seemed the greatest probabilities that could possibly happen, and altogether too natural to make a demonstration about. Those flying chords; those odorous chromatic scales; those sephyr-like tremolos; those perfectly spiritual arpeggios, leaping up to Heaven like a flame from the altar; those passionate combinations, struggling for mastery, like man's desires: why, they all seemed as simple and wholesome, to our mind, as truth itself.

The striking peculiarity of Mr. GOTTSCHALK's playing is a remarkable individuality. All his best thoughts are uttered in a language of his own. He may strike the keys as vigorously as any one else, but we are not conscious of the fact. We only know that he produces a quality of tone which is new to us, which we have never heard equalled, and wherein we can detect nothing that is mechanical or physical, or suggestive of a man with his wrist-bands turned up. In his loudest passages he preserves this characteristic, in the softest also; and whether he is in the bass or the treble, it is the same. We can now understand why Mr. GOTTSCHALK has failed to win the crown of the Immortals. There is something too much of the poet in his nature to stoop to the drudgery of the world. He drinks nectar, and feeds on ambrosia, while the world drinks ale and feeds on beef. The programme of Thursday night contained eight pieces, of the execution of which we could scarcely say anything except that it was absolutely perfect. A charming Ballade in the first part developed some of Mr. GOTTSCHALK's happiest characteristics; the instrument became vocal under his touch. A marche de nord which followed is an admirable composition, not unworthy of GROVE himself, whose style it resembles. In the performance of this piece, Mr. GOTTSCHALK displayed an unequaled breadth and vastness.

Then came the banjo piece, redolent of Southern life and rhythm, and performed in a way that no one else can hope to approach. In the second part of the programme we were especially delighted with the piece called the "Last Hope," a lamentation of a decidedly Hebrew character and GUONI's 'Marche Funebre. We should like to write a column or two about these last two compositions, but as our space and our readers' patience are both exhausted, we will content ourselves with saying that they were both superbly rendered, especially the first.

In conclusion, we urge on our readers to hear Mr. GOTTSCHALK for themselves. They cannot fail to profit by a keen study and analysis of his characteristic style and individuality.

Who's to be the new City Judge?

There is a good deal of curiosity about town as to whom the Governor will appoint to the City Judgeship vacated by the resignation of Judge SCHAM. There is, of course, no frightful lack of gentlemen willing to take it. The Temperance men are urging the claims of Mr. CARSON, who also is a Whig. Some of the Whigs "proper" push the claims of Judge W. F. RAM, who vacated the office last January. We have heard the name of Hon Wm. ALLEN mentioned, and also that of Judge BIRDSALL of the Marine Court. As to the prospects of either or any of these gentlemen, we find nobody who is particularly posted.

Death of Nicholas Dean.

NICHOLAS DEAN, President of the Croton Aqueduct Department Board, died Friday morning, in the 65th year of his age. Mr. DEAN was a most worthy citizen and most highly appreciated. He has been County Clerk, and Secretary to the Convention which framed the City Charter; he was President of the Croton Water Board from 1849 to 1853, President of the Long Island Water Works from 1853 to 1854; and more lately President of the Harlem Railroad. He resigned this last office at the last election of Directors.

Fined for Contempt.

In the Marine Court, yesterday morning, Judge THOMPSON passed sentence on the twelve Jurors who had agreed to disagree, by fining them twenty dollars, and confining those who refused to pay the impost. Several of the Jurors, who had well-filled porte monnaies, paid up, but others refused, and, it is said, intend to test the authority of the Court to impose such a fine.

Arrival of the Hermann.

The United States Mail steamship Hermann, EDWARD HIGGINS, Commander, has arrived with dates from Southampton to the 5th inst., 94 passengers and 652 tons of German, French and British merchandise.

Our advices by the Hermann are not so late by three days as those brought by the Asia.

☞ There was a grand Union Concert last night at the Tabernacle, of Newsboys and Five Points' Mission scholars. A grand time, a full house, and a very touching sight.

GREAT FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—NEW-YORK, OCT. 15, 1855.—Messrs. S. C. HERRING & CO.: GENTLEMEN; We take pleasure in stating that the HERRING PATENT SAFE, which we purchased from you about a year since, has been the means of preserving our books, papers, &c., from fire, at the destruction of our flour mill in Brooklyn, early on the morning of the 11th instant. The safe was exposed to a severe heat about eight hours; and when cooled off and opened the contents were found entirely uninjured. We cheerfully recommend your Safe to public confidence. A. BREWER & BROTHER.

The above-mentioned Safe, which has been obtained by other parties, can be seen, with all the original plates and marks (as it came from the ruins,) at the store of the subscribers, who are sole proprietors of, and have on hand a large assortment of HERRING'S Patent Champion Fire and Burglar-proof Safes, with HALL'S Patent Powder-proof Locks, together with an assortment of the old WILDER'S Patent Salamander Safes at reduced prices.

FOR SALE.

THE [illegible] RAILROAD COMPANY [illegible] OF THE STATE OF [illegible] FOR A DISTANCE OF [illegible] MILES OF [illegible] NORTH TO THE [illegible] OF [illegible] IN THE STATE OF [illegible] [illegible] Company are [illegible] to offer for sale the building of this Railroad, and have made the entire north to the extreme north of the State of Michigan. It [illegible] from end to end, through the richest and most [illegible] Portions of that State, the best [illegible] of which are adjacent Old Settlements, and have been [illegible] for many years. The road passes over the heads [illegible] Miles of this road thrown open the lands for cultivation. They are scattered from one to fifteen miles on each side of it, through its entire length.

The soil is a dark, rich loam, from one to five feet in depth, is pronounced and universally admitted by all who visit it, to be the best adapted for the cultivation of Wheat, Indian Corn, &c.

The first crop of Indian Corn planted on the newly broken Prairie usually pays the cost of plowing and cultivation, and yields from 60 to 80 bushels per acre. Wheat yields an equally large yield, and is sure to yield very large yields. One man will do plow and two men of team will break one and a half to two acres per day. Contracts can be made for breaking, and for sale on Wheat, at $2 to $3 per acre. By indirect management farms may be broken and fenced the first, and under a high state of cultivation the second year.

The Rich Prairie of the three tiers of Illinois, over high-priced lands in the Eastern and Middle States, is known to be much more than sufficient to pay the difference of transportation to the Western market, and the rapid growth of flourishing towns and villages along the line of this road offers a growing home demand for farm products.

Coal and wood are delivered along the road at different points, at from $1 50 to $2 the ton or cord.

Parties having in view lands, Kansas, Nebraska, or Minnesota, (but these latter are more distant,) should be made aware that the country west of the Mississippi is distinct from that of railroads; that the convenience of transporting grain and produce from farms on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, direct to the great Eastern market, is sufficient of itself to pay the investment of from $10 to $15 per acre higher than is in Government lands in Iowa. In other words, that it costs no much more to get produce from the interior of the country west of the Mississippi to the Eastern market, that the former will find it much more profitable to locate on the line of this railroad.

PRICE AND TERMS OF PAYMENT.

The price will vary from $8 to $20, according to location, quality, &c. Contracts may be made during the year 1855, stipulating the purchase money to be paid in five annual instalments—the first to become due in two years from date of contract, the others annually thereafter. The last payment will become due at the end of the fifth year from date of contract.

By the 24 section of the Act of the Legislature, approved 10th February, 1853, these lands are free from taxation until they are sold for, and a deed of conveyance granted to the purchaser.

INTEREST WILL BE CHARGED AT ONLY TWO PER CENT. PER ANNUM.

As a security for the performance of the contract, the first two years' interest must be paid in advance, but it must be understood that one-tenth of the land purchased shall yearly be brought under cultivation. Longer credits at six per cent. per annum may be negotiated by special application. Twenty per cent. from the credit price will be deducted for cash, in which case the Company's Construction Bonds will be received.

It is believed that the price, long credit, and low rate of interest charged for these lands, will enable a man with a few hundred dollars in cash, and ordinary industry, to make himself independent before all the purchase money becomes due. In the Commercial Metropolis of the rapidly rising country will probably have increased their value four or five-fold. When required, an experienced person will accompany applicants, to give information and aid in selecting lands.

Large Plats, showing the precise location of the lands throughout the State, may be seen at the office. Small pocket Plats, as a guide to any part of the Company's lands, and pamphlets, containing interesting information accompanied by numerous letters from respectable farmers throughout the State, may be had on application at the office of the Company, No. 22 Michigan-st., Chicago.

TRIESEMAR.—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY.—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the sales of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIESEMAR No. 1 is the remedy for all the sexual debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c. Its effects are efficacious in youth, manhood and old age; the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the decline of life, if the Triesemar were universally adopted; all physical impotency would vanish like magic before its influences, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESEMAR No. 2.—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESEMAR No. 3.—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESEMAR No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in tin cases at $5 each, or four cases in one for $20, which saves $5; and in $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9; divided into separate doses, as administered by Vienna, Paris, London, &c.

To be had wholesale and retail of Mr. H. A. BARROW, No. 31 Greene-st., near Canal, New-York, specially appointed by the Proprietor and Patentee as Agent for the United States, and every other part of America. Immediately on receiving a remittance Mr. Barrow will forward the Triesemar to any part of the world, securely packed and addressed according to the instructions of the writer.

Sold also by W. R. ZIEBER, No. 44 South 3d-st., below Chestnut-st., Philadelphia. Retail Agents required. Terms cash.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.—PILLS THAT ARE PILLS.—Prof. HAYES, State Chemist, of Massachusetts, says they are the best of all PILLS, and annexed are the men who certify that Dr. HAYES knows, viz:

Lemuel Shaw, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Massachusetts.
Emory Washburn, Governor of Massachusetts.
W. C. Plunkett, Lieut.-Governor of Massachusetts.
Edward Everett, Ex-Secretary of State and Senator of U. S.
Robert C. Winthrop, Ex-Speaker of House of Representatives U. S. A.
Abbott Lawrence, Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain.
† John B. Fitzpatrick, Catholic Bishop of Boston.

MORE THAN ARE MINE!!!

Among the diseases this PILL has cured with astonishing rapidity, we may mention costiveness, bilious complaints, rheumatism, dropsy, heartburn, headache arising from a foul stomach, nausea, indigestion, morbid function of the bowels and pain arising therefrom, flatulency, loss of appetite, all ulcerous and cutaneous diseases, which require an evacuant medicine, scrofula or king's evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach; such as deafness, partial blindness, neuralgic pains, nervous irritability, tremors, palsy, diseases of the liver and kidneys, gout, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body, or obstructions of its functions.

They are the best purgative medicine ever discovered, and you will but need to use them once to know it.

Prepared by J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass., and sold by all Druggists everywhere.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, it has become fully established that it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over excitement and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an aperient it is equally remarkable; acting on the secretions of the bowels and stomach, it assists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price $2 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office No. 75 Maiden-lane.

DR. MAGNIN.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.—Dr. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.—The combinations of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, painful menstruation, removing all obstructions, whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, disturbed sleep, which always arise from interruption of nature. They can be procured at the sole established office, where his new pamphlet, which should be read, accompany each box. Price $1. For sale by CHAS. H. RING, No. 196 Broadway; C. V. CLICKENER & CO., No. 61 Barclay-st.; BARNES & PARK, No. 504 Broadway; C. S. HUTCHINGS, No. 135 West Broadway; J. WATSON, No. 201 Bleecker-st; D. DE GRAFF, No. 80 Grand-st; in Brooklyn by Mrs. HAYES, No. 175 Fulton-st.; in Newark by A. B. HILL & CO., No. 358 Broad-st.; T. R. CALLENDER, cor. 3d and Walnut sts., Philadelphia. Sent, by mail by inclosing $1 to Dr. C. L. CHEESEMAN, No. 192 Broadway, New-York.

MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE.—11th edition, cloth, 345 pages, 75 colored engravings, representing all the diseases of the genital organs of the male and female, with the latest discoveries in reproduction. The afflicted should use no remedies before learning from this valuable work the superiority of the W's course in Paris and the frequent use of private diseases. Both married and single should consult it. Sold at No. 222 Broadway, and mailed free for $1, by the author, M. LAMONT, Physician and Surgeon, No. 49 Reade-st., corner of No. 200 Broadway, where he cures all those diseases, from 11 A. M. till 2, and 6 to 9 P. M., Sundays excepted. Address letters, Box No. 844 New-York Post-Office. W's course is the most frequent in recommending Dr. LAMONT to the afflicted.—Courier des Etats Unis, Etats Unis Zeitung, Democrat, Day-Book, Courier, Dispatch.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.—DR. WATSON confines his practice to a certain class of disease, in which he has treated more than twenty thousand cases, without one instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and do not keep the patient from business, or expose him to detection, while in most recent cases there is a cure in twenty-four hours. Dr. WATSON desires to state that, as many have been deceived by the promises of certain charlatans, and been injured by drugs, patients are respectfully invited to call, in the first place, as there is no charge for consultation. W. WATSON, M. D.,
Many years Surgeon to the Lock Hospital; Author of "The Cause and Cure;" numerous plates, $1. Office No. 60 Walker-st., near Broadway.

DR. RALPH'S PRACTICAL PRIVATE TREATISE.—16th edition; 248 pp., with plates. The most clear and practical information is given on every form of these diseases—invaluable to every one it may concern, and constituting a safeguard against quackery. Price $1. Sold at No. 131 Nassau, No. 2 Vesey-st., (Astor House,) and by the author.

Dr. RALPH is consulted especially on the more severe or chronic cases, at his office, No. 649 Houston-st., near Wooster, between the hours of 9 to 12 A. M. and 6 to 9 P. M., Sunday excepted.

DR. HUNTER.—No. 3 Division-st., New-York, so long and favorably known to the public, may be consulted at his old established office, where he has practised in one branch of medicine for the last 24 years, and made more cures than any other man in the City, in many instances of persons considered incurable, some of whom he has permission to refer to as heretofore. Charges moderate, and in all cases a cure guaranteed. Caution.—My great remedy, HUNTER'S BLOOD DROP, that cures certain diseases without drying its poison in the blood, can only be had as above. Price $1. Call and get the Monitor of Health.

NO CHARGE UNLESS CURED.—Dr. JOHNSON, No. 16 Duane-st. (Chatham Bank Building,) may be consulted with confidence on all diseases requiring secrecy. His long experience of 24 years in this specialty of the profession enables him to treat successfully those who may have suffered from the malpractice of medical impostors, many of which are to be found in all large cities, but particularly in the City of New-York. Dr. J. being a graduate of the New-York University, guarantees a cure in all cases undertaken. Hours from 9 A. M. to 8 P. M.

MEDICAL OFFICE.—Dr. COOPER, No. 14 Duane-st., between Chatham and William sts., may be consulted with confidence. His medicines are applicable to every form of disease; even the weakest of them can take them without fear of discovery. His medicines for nervous debility, after removing the disease, leave the system in as good condition as before the dread malady took up its abode therein. Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M., to 8 o'clock P. M.

DR. CORBETT.—No. 19 Duane-st., may be consulted with confidence on diseases. Twenty-three years in one specialty in the profession, enables him to guarantee speedy and permanent cures. His method for treatment is the same as that pursued by the great Hospitals of Paris, and all cases undertaken treated with the greatest candor. N. B.—Dr. C. is a member of the New-York University. See his diploma in his office.

A CHECK.

Washington Irving to the Public.

[Extract from the Times, Friday, Dec. 21, 1855.]

By the Success of the Morning Post.

The statement in some of the papers, that Mr. Irving is about to retire on an ex est office, has been received by the Court, Bureaus, and another print, as a confirmation of the Hoaxes not only upon me, but on Mr. Irving.

The fair reputation of every man is dear to him, both on his own account and that of his family; and although I have sometimes been greatly assailed, and without, in certain papers, I have taken no public notice of such attacks, and, but for the implication of Mr. Irving, would now prefer to trust to the judgment of my fellow-citizens from the evidence of my life that my thing I might say in my own behalf.

In this case, I cannot, nor may be summed up as follows: Two Democratic publications, attending a Democratic Convention at Syracuse. I utterly deny the two first charges, and while I admit the third, I only say one to point out an act or expression of mine of the Convention, violative of the rights of any one, or inconsistent with the deportment of an orderly and peaceful citizen.

The denial of the first two charges in the face of the confident and clamorous assertions of the papers mentioned, compels me to give a brief history of my life.

My father died during my infancy. I was, as soon as I could be useful in the business, about the age of 10, bound out with a butcher, to learn the trade. With the indentures I have was raised in such intervals of time as I could be spared from the business in which I was placed. These, of course, were few and brief. Having no father to watch over and to guide my steps, I associated principally with persons of my own age, engaged in the same business and knew nothing, except as one hearing from a great distance, of what is called refined society.

In the company in which I was thus brought up and moved, personal conflicts often occurred, and a man who would tamely submit to wrong or insult was thought less of than one who protected himself and resented offence.

I was athletic, and when I attained early manhood I was called upon to defend myself against ordinary assaults. I am what may be called quick to resent what I conceive to be an insult offered with intent to provoke a personal collision.

Surrounded by these circumstances and with these defects, if you please to term them so, of education and temper, it happened occasionally that personal encounters took place between me and others.

Owing to my muscular strength, or good fortune, or what not, I seldom or never came off second best. In the end of these combats complaints were sometimes made against me to the police, but in no instance have I been condemned by any court upon such complaints, and I now assert that it never occurred and cannot be shown that I ever in any single instance provoked such personal contest.

These personal conflicts, which I do not now pretend were justifiable, and the failure of the parties to have me punished by the Courts, to which the defeat, they appealed, created a combination of enemies, who were determined to punish and put me down.

Some years ago, I engaged in business on my own account, and, by my attention and industry, obtained a respectable and profitable custom. The engrossing character of my business required the greater part of my time, while my changed position, giving me new and different views of life and the actions of men, inclined me to shun the occasions, not before sufficiently avoided, of being led into difficulty and trouble. But, with the best intentions in the world on my part, I was not to be let alone.

From the causes, I suppose, above mentioned, there arose a persecution of me, which not only threw within its vortex those I had considered friends, but even succeeded in enlisting a portion of the press, to which I had supposed myself as indifferent as unknown. In the dead of the night, a carriage would stop before the door of my residence, beat me, and exhibited their disappointment at not finding me, in loud noises and angry curses. Bullies were employed to visit me in market, and to chastise or threaten me.

One morning, within a year or so, a person whom I knew well and had always been on friendly terms with, came to my stall, and after the usual greeting, said to me: "Jim, I've come down to lick you." I inquired for what reason; what I had done to him; he replied, "Nothing; but A. and B. (naming two of his friends) want me to do it, and I've agreed." "Why don't they come themselves and try it?" I inquired. "Well," said he, "because they don't know as they can; but as it is a sure thing with me, they have asked me to do it, and I've agreed to do it." "But," said I, "we've never had any quarrel, and why should you want to do a dirty work?" "It don't matter," said he; "I've agreed to do it, and am going to; so get ready." Seeing him preparing, and not inquiring further remonstrance would be of any avail, I took the liberty of knocking him down, and punished him very severely. Within a few weeks, this gentleman, ashamed, probably of the unbecoming business in which he had been engaged, emigrated, and is now using his power and muscle in the mines of California, and I hope successfully—in all probability, a wiser if not better man.

Nowhere could I go but I was the object of insult; and when every I was boldly hunted like a beast of the chase, I turned and stood at bay; all the provocations were carefully concealed, and I was exhibited to the public as a ruffian and a brute.

At Stanwix Hall, at imminent danger of my life, I separated Monmouth and Foulk with a pistol in his hand; then I went home and there remained. The testimony in Mr. Barre's trial shows that I had no part or hand in the subsequent affray; yet by the Coroner's Jury (two of whom were pall-bearers at the funeral) was I implicated, and found to be an "accessory by association."

With railroad speed, the Grand Jury followed in the footsteps of the Coroner's Jury, and included me in the indictment for murder. What had I done? Preserved the peace at the risk of my life! an encouraging example for those who have the courage, ability, and opportunity to prevent bloodshed or murder. On this I was imprisoned for a week, until Judges Monmouth Cowles, after full argument, upon the writ of habeas corpus, declared me discharged, indicting me to be unwarranted and an outrage, and opened my prison doors. Yet, does a friend desire to do me a service, from a paper let drop a word in my favor, the fact that I am thus indicted is made a mark of Cain, to set every man's hand and heart against me!

It was not so wonderful that, under all this press, my business suffered. Great has been the loss to me and correspondingly great the gratification of my enemies. When they had succeeded in making me a victim of the Grand Jury, their efforts were redoubled, and no influence within their control was permitted to rest in its endeavors to deprive me of the custom of some of the principal hotels in the City. Then came the press in full cry, and there seemed at the time no better sport to offer than to join in the chase and earth me either in poverty or prison. This may be a source of pleasure to those in the run, but it doesn't present a very admirable specimen of refined nature; this driving a human being, with his wife and innocent children, who must share the lot, out of the pale of decent society into disgrace and despair!

I have never been an aggressor. I have resented insult, as I am, who would not? I have protected myself when attacked. I have been sued and indicted; but in no case have I been unsuccessful in my defence, and I was once praised by the Court for having protected a friendless female from the insults of a gentleman!

That I have committed errors and have done wrong, I frankly admit; but let him who is without sin throw the first stone. All I ask is justice, not favor from any one. And in my judgment, rumors credited without evidence—statements published without proof—attacks made without foundation are not justice, but are doing unto others as you would not wish to be done by. Yours, respectfully,

JAMES IRVING.

COURT CALENDAR.—Saturday.

Motion day in the Supreme, Superior, and United States District Courts.

COMMON PLEAS—Part I—Nos. 258 to 262, 264 to 267, 269. Part II—No. [illegible]

The Schuyler Fraud.

SUPREME COURT—General Term.

Before Judges Mitchell, Parker and Peaslee.

The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company vs. Robert Schuyler, William Cross and 235 other Defendants.—This was an appeal from His Honor, Judge Cowles, at Special Term, sustaining a demurrer interposed by the defendant William Cross, to the complaint, and ordering the complaint to be dismissed. The Judges affirmed unanimously the decision of the Court below.

Judge Strong, in expressing his concurrence stated, that he considered the complaint could not be maintained, as a bill of interpleader was a bill of peace, and was bad as embracing numerous separate causes of action; but he remarked that he gave no opinion upon the question whether the acts of Schuyler in issuing spurious certificates of stock, were or were not binding upon the Company.

His Honor, Judge Duer, stated that he was of opinion that the demurrer was well taken, and the complaint ought to be dismissed, but he wished to be understood as differing from Judge Cowles in relation of the power of Schuyler to bind the Corporation by his fraudulent issue of stock.

His Honor, Judge Parker, stated he was of opinion that the complaint ought to be dismissed, because it attempted to embrace different and independent claims in one action, but he had not considered and gave no opinion as to the effect of Schuyler's acts upon the rights of the Company.

Wm. C. Noyes and C. Tracy, for appellants. F. B. Cutting, for appellee.

PUBLIC'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—It is useless to announce the business of this fine Theatre. As usual each night after night and week in and week out, unknown attractive programmes are presented, indeed, to suit the different audiences. To-night "Sunshine and Tears." Third night also of "King Charming," and concluding with the pantomime.

"DON'T FORGET THE COFFEE URN."—Such was the charge given Mr. Shrub, as he left the house in the morning. The truth is, Mr. Shrub forgot "the purchase that we often are from which to fill the urn that shines but not instructive," and only on that morning on New-Year's Day. To his phiz (?) calls, Mr. S. brought the urn—a splendid one—for $10, the night here had one for $5.0 he also took a cake-basket, a castor, and a few cups for the children, remarking, as he was going out, that if Shrub's note was not protested, he would call and purchase a $60 plated tea set—otherwise, Mrs. S. would have to be satisfied with a Britannia set of the value of $10, either of which, of course, he would obtain at the store of LUCIUS HART,

FRIDAY, Dec. 21—P. M.

There was not a very active business in Stocks to-day, nor any very decided change in prices. The list at the close was generally weaker than yesterday afternoon; Erie, 50¾; Reading, 93¾; Illinois Centrals, 81½; Toledo, 72. The English letters brought a few orders for New-York Central Sixes and Sevens, Illinois Centrals and Eries, partly limited below the present market. The offerings of these standard Road Bonds, with the exception of the regular Illinois Construction, are generally in moderate sums. The New-York Central Sevens brought par, ex-dividend. The Coupon was paid on 15th inst. The shares of the Company were regularly called at the Board to-day, after a suspension of nearly four months, sales at 92½@¾@92 cash, and 93@92¾ buyer 60 days. A motion to reconsider the resolution of yesterday to permit dealing by certificate was made this forenoon, and negatived—40 to 53. The question for the present, therefore, is at rest. The movement for a rise in the Transit Shares appears to have lost its force. Large sales this afternoon at 17 ⅌ cent. There is a fair request for State Stocks in anticipation of the January coupon. Indiana Fives are at 81¾ ⅌ cent. Missouri Sixes 89 cash. The Western Road Stocks are not well supported to-day, and the Bears were disposed to press time contracts at lower rates in Michigan Central, the dividend on which, 6 ⅌ cent. cash, is to be paid on the 21st January. Southern Michigan 94¾ at the close, Cleveland and Pittsburg 68¾, and Rock Island 87¾. The Money brokers report a good offering of means at 7 ⅌ cent., and the demand not very active for Stock purposes. Discounts rate 8@10 ⅌ cent. strictly prime, and 10@12 for fair paper. There is a full feeling in Foreign bills, and steamer going until Wednesday, Christmas day intervenes, the mail will probably be fully made up on Monday afternoon. The impression is that there is a considerable accumulation of Southern drawn bills, as well as a good amount of Exchange, making against the direct export of Grain, Flour and Cotton. The Foreign letters to-day have imparted a little more activity to the General markets. The Continental advices favor the opinion of a continued demand for Breadstuffs for France, Prussia, and some of the smaller German States. The London banking letters are of a cheerful tone, and there appears to be little doubt that the Bank rate of Discount has reached its maximum.

The Baltic is the Collins steamer for next Wednesday. The Pacific will be due on Thursday, and will return on Saturday week, the 5th of January. A Cunarder leaves Liverpool the same day, or at furthest, Saturday, 12th January, for New-York. The first of the Belgian line of new screw steamers for New-York leaves Antwerp on the 1st of January, to call at Southampton, England. The line, at first, will make monthly trips each way. Four vessels are built, or building, for the Company, called the Belgique, the Constitution, Leopold, and Duc de Brabant.

A new railroad company has been organized to construct a line from Toledo to Detroit. The direction is composed of gentlemen connected with the Cleveland and Toledo, and Southern Michigan Railroad Companies—the new road being projected with a design to obtain a large business, by a connection with the Great Western Canadian Road. The following are the names of the Directors: John S. Barry, Kalamazoo; John Wilkinson, Syracuse, New-York; E. C. Litchfield, New-York; Hugh White, Cohoes, New-York; Hamilton White, Syracuse, New-York; D. A. Noble, Monroe, Michigan; W. Clark, Monroe, Michigan; Henry Ledyard, Detroit, Michigan; Henry P. Baldwin, Detroit, Michigan.

The People's Bank of this City has made a half yearly dividend of 4 ⅌ cent. and the People's Fire Insurance Company, 5 ⅌ cent.

An Old Dividend Wanted.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Trustees of the old Syracuse and Utica Railroad Co., in their circular of March, 1854, informed the stockholders that the affairs of the Company will be finally closed February, 1855, when a further dividend will be paid, of probably one dollar per share. The stockholders who recollect this circular must think it is time now for the Trustees to pay this dividend, or explain to them why it is withheld.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully Reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

FRIDAY, Dec. 21—6 P. M.

ASHES—Remain at $8 50 for Pearls, and $7 50 for Pots, ⅌ 100 lbs., with limited stocks and sales.

BEESWAX—American Yellow is held at 27c. ⅌ lb., but is inactive.

CANDLES—The demand is brisk, and as the supply is rather decreasing, prices are very firm and buoyant.

COAL—Is inactive and languid, at former quotations.

COFFEE—Rio is in good request, and is very firm, with sales since our last of about 2,200 bags, at from 10c. @12¾c.—mostly at 11c.@11½c. ⅌ lb. Other kinds are quiet at unchanged prices.

COPPER—Is salable and steady, at 33c.@34c. for new Sheathing; 24c.@25c. for old do.; and 28c. for yellow do. ⅌ lb.

COTTON—Has attracted more attention, and has slightly increased in value. The sales of the day are estimated at nearly 2,500 bales—making about 6,500 for the week.—prices closing, partially, ⅛c. ⅌ lb. higher than yesterday. Middling Upland is now worth 9¼c., middling Orleans 9⅝c., and other grades proportionate figures, ⅌ lb. The supply is extremely light, and holders look for still better prices.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western brands are in improved demand, and with less pressing on the market, prices are firmer and rising. The low and medium grades are the liveliest. The finer qualities are rather quiet, but firm. The river and railway receipts to-day were something over 13,000 bbls. The sales comprised nearly 16,000 bbls., at about the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 12½@$6 18¾
Straight State	6 18¾@ 6 25
Favorite and Extra State	6 25 @ 6 37½
Mixed Western	6 18¾@ 6 25
Common to good Indiana and Michigan	6 25 @ 6 50
Fancy Michigan	6 50 @ 6 75
Common to Good Ohio	6 25 @ 6 50
Fancy Ohio	6 50 @ 6 75
Extra Ohio	6 75 @10 25
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 75 @10 00
Fancy Genesee	6 75 @ 9 00
Extra Genesee	9 50 @11 50

Towards the close, our lowest quotations for common and medium Flour were unacceptable to factors, who seemed reluctant to sell under our outside figures. Canadian remains quiet but firm, with sales of 600 bbls. Superfine to best Extra, at $6 50@$10 ⅌ bbl. Southern has not varied, sales since our last having amounted to about 1,200 bbls. Mixed to Fancy and Extra, at $6@$10 75 ⅌ bbl. R
